Honoring
KEN STEIN
with an Endowed Professorship

Alumni and friends are undertaking an effort to honor, in perpetuity, our teacher and friend Ken Stein through the creation of the Kenneth W. Stein endowment at Emory College of Arts and Sciences. Our goal is to secure funding to fully endow a professorship for the study of modern Israel or a program endowment to continue the work of studying modern Israel.

Emory College Giving Opportunities

$2 MILLION GOAL: creates the endowed Kenneth W. Stein Professorship for the Study of Modern Israel at Emory College of Arts and Sciences

Gifts and pledges can be provided over five years, and groups of donors can provide gifts in honor of Ken Stein. Gifts received in excess of the goal will help support this professorship in research and study. As funding for the endowment builds, all gifts will be placed in a quasi endowment to support the study of modern Israel.

At the end of five years, if the full $2 million goal is not reached, the quasi endowment will become a permanent endowment if at least $500,000 is raised. This endowment will be called the Kenneth W. Stein Fund for the Study of Modern Israel and will be affiliated with the Tam Institute for Jewish Studies at Emory College of Arts and Sciences.

ANNUAL GIFTS to the Institute for the Study of Modern Israel (ISMI) are deeply appreciated in addition to gifts and pledges to honor Professor Stein. Annual gifts, which help preserve ISMI’s strong national reputation, will support courses on modern Israel, student internships in Israel, and Israel-related lectures and conferences.

This is an opportunity for countless former students of Ken and those who are passionate about Israel education to ensure that Emory continues leading the conversation in which Ken has been such an important voice for over 30 years.
